Rector's Message

Dear Readers,

I would like to extend my New Year greetings to all. I hope your 2018 is off to a great and safe start!

It's an undeniable fact that training is one of the important tools for enhancing professional knowledge and capability of the management of an organization. Hence, without proper training, we really cannot expect to have a professional and qualified police. PSC emphasizes problem-based and career relevant learning that enhances problem solving and critical thinking skills.

We are pleased that PSC has successfully completed all scheduled courses. We are continually scheduling new programs. Speaking of events, I am beyond ecstatic about our INTERPOL courses. The INTERPOL courses have been our signature event for this newsletter. Total 42 participants from 17 countries of South and Southeast Asia participated in two courses. PSC remains committed to the INTERPOL mission of connecting police for a safer world. That is why we seized the opportunity to host the INTERPOL sponsored special training courses for the police officers of different countries. This kind of training will essentially increase collaboration between countries in transnational investigations, information sharing and identification of criminal networks. I am hopeful that the objectives of the courses have rightly been fulfilled through the contents of the courses and the skills and knowledge that the participants will develop from these courses will go a long way to reduce crimes.

During this tenure, the result of Master of Applied Criminology and Police Management- first batch has been published. All students of this batch successfully completed this course. PSC made significant infrastructural development during this time also. The natural beauties, accommodation facility, cleanliness, security of PSC have increased to the optimum level.

Each day is a new day. One of our "resolutions" for this year is to make every effort to remember that each day is in fact a new beginning that unlocks new opportunities. I thank all the directing staff and police authority for their sincere endeavor and efforts to make this institution a 'centre of excellence' for Bangladesh Police and a regional hub of training excellence for police officers.

Let me conclude by saying "thank you" for being with us. If you have any thoughts to share, please let us know. We look forward to making a difference together in 2018. Stay well and warm!

Dr. M. Sadiqur Rahman, ndc
Rector

Engagement of PSC with INTERPOL: Broadening of a New Horizon

Police training plays a key role in INTERPOL's overall mission to promote international police cooperation. It helps to build the capacity of police for its member countries, equipping them with the knowledge, skills, and best practices needed to meet today's policing challenges. Its wide range of initiatives is designed to bridge the gap between national and international policing and help law enforcement agencies make maximum use of the services provided by INTERPOL.

Ever since its emergence, one of the strategic priorities of PSC is to broaden international linkage and create learning opportunities from the international partners in order to standardize its institutional capacity. We have come a long way as PSC is already partnering with a good number of international organizations. Partnership, however, with INTERPOL heralds the opening of a new door and in the process markedly reinforces the credibility of PSC as a wonderful collaborative partner.

27 February 2018 is one of the biggest days in the history of Police Staff College Bangladesh which is marked with the signing of Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) between Police Staff College Bangladesh and INTERPOL, the apex international Police organization. The signing ceremony was illuminated with the gracious presence of Harold O'Connell, INTERPOL Director of Capacity Building And Training, Dr. Mohammad Javed Patwary, bpm (bar), Inspector General of Bangladesh Police, Dr. M. Sadiqur Rahman ndc, Rector, Police Staff College Bangladesh.

It has unmistakably taken PSC's international collaboration to a new height when PSC, partnering with INTERPOL, hosted a couple of two-weeks courses titled 'INTERPOL Criminal Intelligence Analysis Training for South & Southeast Asia'. The two courses were held as part of the INTERPOL Capacity Building and Training strategy for 2017-2020, with the aim of reinforcing partnerships with regional stakeholders in the law enforcement training arena. Criminal intelligence analysis and the use of social media are the focus of INTERPOL in two of its courses that aim at building the capacity of police in South and Southeast Asia to combat terrorism. The two courses conducted at Police Staff College Bangladesh, were funded by the Government of Canada.

The first course held from 19 February to 02 March 2018 comprises of 20 participants from 09 countries including Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Timor-Leste. An observer, 02 INTERPOL staff and an instructor were there to facilitate the trainees.

The course was held under Project Scorpius, an Interpol inter-regional project on countering terrorism and related transnational crime. The key objective of the 2-year Project Scorpius is to foster collaboration between INTERPOL member countries to enhance investigative and analytical skills of law enforcement agencies so as to better prevent, detect, and investigate terrorism and related transnational crime.

Meanwhile, the second course, held from 26 February to 8 March, was on countering the use of social media for terrorist purposes. It was conducted under INTERPOL's Project Trace as part of its capacity building programme to reinforce ASEAN counter-terrorism capacity and expertise. The course covered a wide range of contemporary topics like- the intelligence process, risk analysis, data processing on Microsoft excel, Open source Data Gathering which are key to countering the use of internet for terrorism purposes. 21 participants from 10 countries covering Bangladesh, Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Laos, Philippines, Singapore, Vietnam, Thailand participated in the course with 05 INTERPOL staff to facilitate them.

The three-year Canadian-funded Project Trace aims to equip ASEAN member countries with the skills, tools and methodologies required to combat the use of Internet and social media platforms for terrorism purposes, and to gather online intelligence to track foreign terrorist fighters.

The agreement signed in the form of MoU during the training sessions will see INTERPOL's I-24/7 secure global police communications system deployed to the Police Staff College so as to deliver further training on the use of INTERPOL's policing capabilities, and provide access to its Global Learning Centre, thus providing institutional sustainability.

The successful completion of the partnership training courses in collaboration with INTERPOL proclaims PSC's credentials in arranging and hosting bigger events that has already prompted some other reputed domestic and international organizations to come to terms with PSC to use it as a regional hub for hosting many more in future.

Terrorist Crime Scene Investigation (TCSI)

Experience with terrorism varies around the world. For instance, countries such as USA enforcement organizations and forensic laboratories have developed specific expertise with this type of work, while others can learn whether or not have been involved occasionally in similar cases.

Forensic science has many different kinds of expertise most of which can be applied to the investigation of terrorist offences. For that reason, specialist skills in CSI may be required to examine the scenes of terrorist offences. It is important to consider what special expertise a forensic institute needs in order to be effective in supporting police forces or specialised units in combating Terrorism. There is a constant development in crime scene investigation for working with the police or specialized anti-terrorist units which allow the collection and analysis of materials by the full range of forensic techniques. In addition institutes may have a role in the identification of victims or even suspects from bodies or body parts by DNA techniques.

Like a traditional scene of crime, it is important that the forensic investigations start at the terrorist scene as soon as possible before traces and other physical evidence have been contaminated, destroyed or lost. That approach is widely accepted for non-terrorist crime scenes but may not apply automatically for terrorist scenes of crime due to the disorder, panic, lack of experience and the need to help the victims. The CSI, as in every scene, should attend as soon as possible. By keeping constant contact with high and low rank police officers and intelligence officers, he/she must ensure that no one else enters the scene prior to attendance, and the scene is cordoned off.

Keeping the above mentioned things in mind, PSC in partnership with Regional Security Office, US Embassy, Dhaka conducted a course on Terrorist Crime Scene Investigation (TCSI) from 4th February to 15th February 2018, aiming at better equipping Bangladesh police officers so that they can investigate terrorist cases more efficiently.

1st Endeavor for Academic Excellence of PSC

The introduction of the graduate learning program on Master of Applied Criminology and Police Management has shed light on PSC's academic endeavour. It has been a big stride forward towards PSC's pursuit of Excellence. The program was introduced in July 2016 with a strong work-based functional curriculum designed to provide a sound police education. The curriculum and course credits of Master's program reflect broader education objectives in applied criminology, police leadership, management and contemporary policing issues in order to achieve a safer community. The long cherished result of the first batch of PSC's Masters program has recently been published. PSC is happy to publish the result in due time. Owing to some unavoidable reasons 14 out of 28 students couldn't continue the program, though. However the students have done wonders with 2 of them secured A grade, 5 got B+ and the rest achieved B grade. PSC is delighted to congratulate them on their brilliant success.

The PSC is dedicated to offer advance degree on the subjects of policing, criminology and criminal justice. This graduate learning program aims at equipping police and other relevant professionals with critical insights on contemporary security and criminology arenas so that they can effectively and efficiently discharge their duties. PSC offers it not only to the police candidates but also to the non-police students who are either from various government/ non government organizations or are very fresh students who want to develop their careers on criminal justice or law enforcement.
