Rector's Message

Dear Readers,

It is an immense pleasure for us to launch this last edition of the year 2017. We intend to make it a regular publication and use it to keep you in touch with news and developments in relation to the PSC overall activities.

I would like to thank those who put a lot of his time and energy into this initiative, created the opportunity for the Newsletter to be born and made it happen. This Newsletter provides us with a chance to reflect on what PSC has been able to achieve in the last four months. In the current issue, apart from institutional reports, the Newsletter highlights the long awaited Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) between Macquarie University, Australia and Police Staff College Bangladesh which explores new opportunities for both of the parties.

While technology efficiently delivers news stories to our desktops, laptops and mobile devices, magazines, newsletters are all about context—how ideas and images are presented in relation to one another and within a larger point of view, this newsletter would be an effective communication tool for employees, stake holders as well as the organization itself.

I hope you will enjoy this issue and do let us know if there are any topics you'd like to see covered in the future. It will surely help us in making these transactions more and more useful and desirable.

Let me now conclude with a warm thanks to our faculty members who contributed to it as these contributions are essential to the newsletter's success. I hope they will continue cooperating with me in the same great way they did it before.

As 2017 is over, I would like to take this opportunity to extend my best wishes for 2018 so that it appears as a very special year for us.

Dr. M. Sadiqur Rahman
Rector

Seminars

"Using Cyber to Combat Terrorism"

Cyberspace is probably the fastest growing domain for a wide range of malicious activities and crimes. It also introduces many differing risks and vulnerabilities to our society. Cyber attacks can come in many differing forms. Cyber terrorists may employ cyberspace not only to cause harm, but also to facilitate their activities, including laundering of finances, recruitment and promotion of their activities. Therefore, cyber security professionals must be ready for an imminent threat from this act of terrorism. We can deal with Cyber terrorists by passive or active defense or by using both passive and active means.

PSC has arranged a seminar titled "Using Cyber to Combat Terrorism". Participants will be able to apply their knowledge from this course to combat terrorism. PSC has conducted the partnership course by cooperation with Regional Security Office, US Department of Justice U.S Embassy, Dhaka. Her Excellency, Ms. Marcia Bernicat, US Ambassador to Bangladesh was present at the inaugural ceremony of the course. The course continued from 04-07 December 2017. Radical Extremism: Issues and Challenges

Participants of "Radical Extremism: Issues and Challenges" with presenters and faculty members

A seminar titled "Radical Extremism: Issues and Challenges" was held at the International Conference Centre at PSC on November 04, 2017. On that occasion, the first presentation topic was -"Community based counterterrorism approaches to preventing terrorism". It was presented by Dr.

Mohammed Bin Kashem, Associate Professor of Sociology & Dean (In-Charge), Curriculum Development & Evaluation Centre, National University, Gazipur. The main features of the presentation were as follows:

Terrorism is a denial of democracy and of human rights. Police are responsible to protect all individuals from terrorism within their jurisdiction. It is crucial that Police are held accountable for their actions in order to ensure legitimacy, confidence, trust and support from the public. Radicalization is not a threat to society if it is not connected to violence or other unlawful acts. Radicalization can actually be a force for beneficial change. Terrorist radicalization is a process whereby an individual comes to accept terrorist violence as a possible, perhaps even legitimate, course of action. There is a growing recognition that public and individual communities are stakeholders and partners in countering terrorism. Community policing, with its focus on establishing police-public partnerships between the police, other public authorities and communities for proactive problem solving, can make a tangible and durable contribution to broader strategic efforts to prevent terrorism.

The topic of 2nd presentation was "Counter Terrorism Policing in Bangladesh: Issues and Challenges", presented by Md. Monirul Islam, bpm (bar), ppm. The main features of the presentation were as follows:

Terrorism has become a threat to peaceful political order and stability for many countries. The transnational form of the menace is a challenge for any developing nation like Bangladesh.

Moreover, global agenda of different Islamic groups, growing presence of international financial institutions, globalization, growth of information and communication technology, weak government agencies and political institutions have accentuated the threat of terrorism. Since 1999, some terrorist groups have used violence in the name of religion. The present government has adopted zero tolerance towards terrorism and has strongly denied the use of its territory for any terrorist groups for perpetrating terrorist activities inside or outside the country. The government has enacted the Anti-Terrorism Act 2012 and Anti-money Laundering Act 2012. Bangladesh has been cited as a success story in addressing the menace of terrorism. Despite all the successes, there remain numerous challenges in the fight against terrorism.

The trends, pattern and overall threat of terrorism in Bangladesh is new. Therefore, it is difficult for any single government agency to address the problem alone. Terrorism's transnational nature demands cooperation with other countries since it is a fight that needs a global effort. In Bangladesh, the most encouraging part is the awareness created amongst the general population against terrorism and the wrong ideologies that they preach. Thus, it is encouraging finding the general mass protesting and arresting activists of different groups who preach wrong ideologies in public places. The recent protests throughout the country against the verdict of a convict of war crimes charges, and the activities of a religion based political party, is yet another manifestation of the secular nature of Bangladeshis.

PSC Research & Publication Activities

The main motto of PSC's research is to promote justice and reduce crime through communicating evidence-based research to policy and practice. The research works here are regulated under Police Staff College Act 2002. The research outcomes are sent to the Police Headquarters for further action. During the year, PSC was regular in its research and publications. Four research projects were accomplished in 2016-17 and completed accordingly. The research outcomes were valuable and insightful. The following research projects were accomplished during the year:

1. Disaster and Crime in the Coastal Area of Bangladesh: A Study on Police Activities

Abstract : The physical geography of Bangladesh's coastal areas is more diverse and dynamic as generally recognized. The coastal areas of Bangladesh are affected by natural disasters. Land erosion and land subsidence, doing crime and recidivisms, etc are the common picture of the coastal areas. Controlling the social and legal order for the betterment of the society's people, the police force is engaged to maintain the situations that are occurred by the impact of disasters in the coastal areas. The coastal areas of Bangladesh are facing the terms of crime in a new form that hamper the normal livelihood pattern of the disaster prone community people. The people of coastal areas are facing the disaster and its impact from long since. The coastal people are now capable more than ever because they know how to face the disaster and its related factors from the multidimensional institutions working in the coastal areas. On the other hand, the coastal people's perception is being changed day by day towards police because they (police) are trying to serve the local people during natural and man-made catastrophes. Some observational recommendations are mentioned here:

- (a) to change the crime aspects of coastal areas, the police force should be role model in the dimension of functional matrix. The police force should perform the role following the pro-active dimensional model.
- (d) the police force, of course, be trained up how to face the disasters and its related impact in the coastal areas. The local police should be trained up how to control the local crimes and unexpected situations in the coastal areas. The local people are eagerly interested to help the police force in terms of their (local people) security.

- (c) the disaster related laws and rules should be practiced in the coastal areas by involving the several segments service holders such as police, mass people, teachers, local physicians, local elected personalities, etc.
- (d) the police force, of course, be trained up how to face the disasters and its related impact in the coastal areas. The local police should be trained up how to control the local crimes and unexpected situations in the coastal areas. The local people are eagerly interested to help the police force in terms of their (local people) security.
- (e) the community policing is a new resource in the professional police aspects. So, the community policing structure should be practiced in the coastal level to control crime (s).

finally, the coastal people are committing crimes due to needs and demands in the disaster period such during-disaster and post-disaster. The government should give priority to police force to distribute the reliefs and rehabilitations programs in the coastal areas. And the mentality of police force will be changed if they (police) get chance to work in favor of coastal people.

Abstract : Drug addiction has emerged as the most pressing and intractable social problem across regional, social and cultural boundaries. Abuse of drugs among students is one of the most widely discussed contemporary issues in Bangladesh. It is spreading like mushroom and invading the every level of our society like home, educational institution and affecting individual of all classes. The actual scenario of student's drug abuse in Bangladesh is much worse than its visible form. If we do not take urgent steps to reduce the widespread drug abuse, it will gradually engulf entire society and endanger our social tranquillity. Therefore, the study suggests following recommendations

- » Steps should be taken to ban tobacco advertising, promotion and sponsorship.
- » Anti-drug laws need to be updated in accordance with the newer devices of drug smuggling and peddling
- » The law enforcement agencies and the community people should have to work together as law enforcers alone are not capable to overcome the crises. At the same time, the law enforcement agencies should always be on their toes to bust the den of drug dealers, the sources in particular.
- » Law-enforcement agencies should immediately launch a combined drive throughout the country as the severity of drugs has spread to every village of the country
- » Community policing activities should be strengthened. Community policing may help the local structure to resist social disorganization related to drug addiction.
- » Stressed the need for strengthening the vigilance along the border to check smuggling of different narcotic drugs from the neighboring countries
- » The government should take steps to empower the country's youths through training; workshops, competitions, and employment

3. Government and Private Accommodation for Police Officers: An Assessment of Security Risk at Family Life.

Abstract : Police officers remain engaged in maintaining law and order situation of a society. Usually, they require to work against the criminals. This adds additional risks for them and their family members. Family of the police officers may live in a rented house or in a government quarter or a house owned by themselves. Despite in varying degrees, all these types of residences are having safety and security concerns, especially in a country like Bangladesh. Thus, this study assumes that performance of the police officers may be adversely affected by their worry about the security of their family. This study, first of its kind in Bangladesh, was conducted to explore the state of the family residence and security issues of the police officers of Bangladesh. Using survey method, the study collected data from 564 women and men police officers of different rank, workplace and different areas throughout Bangladesh. It is hoped that findings of the study will help the relevant policy makers to know about the security issues of the family residence of the police officers and to take necessary policy measures to reduce the security threats ultimately contribute improve their performances.

Recommendations :

1. The urgency of the need for increasing the security of the family residences of the police officers as families of a substantial proportion of the police officers are living with existence of security threat and, in reality, faced security threat.
2. The government accommodation facility for the families of the police officers is extremely limited. As a result, families of the overwhelming majority of the police officers live in rented house exposing their family and family members to substantial security threats. So, it is recommended to establish sufficient government accommodation facilities for police officers of all Thana complexes throughout the country.
3. The family accommodation facilities for the police officers should be established as complex or cluster basis with essential facilities like schools, day care centers, health clinics, etc. These essential facilities, especially services for children, should be equally accessible by police officers of all ranks so that all children get the opportunity to grow and develop.
4. Findings of the study revealed that senior officers are subject to more security threat. Thus, any policy regarding security and accommodation of the police officers should emphasize the security of the senior police officers.

Security threats are found more in City Corporation and Municipal areas compared to rural areas. Thus, security measures for the police officers' family living in City Corporation and Municipal areas should be prioritized.

4. Public Nuisance & Hijras (Third Gender) Activities: A Study in Dhaka City

Abstract: Hijra is a term used in South Asia – particularly in India – to refer to trans-women (male-to-female transgender individuals). In different areas of India, transgender people are also known as Aravani, Aruvani or Jagappa. In Pakistan and Bangladesh, the hijras are officially recognized as third gender by the government, being neither completely male nor female. In India also, transgender people have been given the status of Third gender and are protected as per the law despite the social ostracism. Nepal, Pakistan, India, and Bangladesh have all legally recognized the existence of a third gender, including on passports and other official documents. This is one of the big problems that the third gender humans do not get their proper rights in our country and for that they create chaos in public places. And for that this is a very important topic for doing research about Public Nuisance and Hijras activities. This tries to explore the nuisance activities which are created by the Hijras.

Recommendations:

- » Society should accept hijra community.
- » Various steps should be taken to increase the awareness in the society.
- » The government and NGOs should work together to ensure their fundamental rights.
- » Though hijras create unusual activities to earn money, people have a soft corner for them. So, it would be easier to create social awareness on hijras.
- » A majority of the hijras feel bad when they ask for money from the people. If they are ensured with their livelihood, they will try to leave the nuisance activities.
- » All the hijras rely on nuisance or unusual activities due to lack of jobs. So, providing jobs can solve their sufferings.
- » the mass media to create awareness for the community.

Ongoing Research activities in the year 2017-2018

Four research projects were accomplished in 2017-18 and four are undergoing as follows:

1. ICT Use in Police Station: A Study on Rural and Urban Perspective.
2. The Impact of Bangladesh Police Training on Field Level Policing: An Analysis
3. Factors that Influence Police Personnel's Character and Behavior : A Study
4. Conviction of Rape Cases: A Case Study on Metropolitan Cities

ICT Use in Police Station: A Study on Rural and Urban Perspective

In modern times, due to the process of liberalization, privatization and globalization the police force is facing new challenges including terrorism, organized crime, drugs, and violence. As crime and criminal activities have become more sophisticated and new trends in crime patterns have developed, law enforcement agencies have responded by enhancing their equipment and technologies as well. Additionally, rise of cyber crime insists the law enforcers to work as global police rather than regional or national police only. Police station works as the key interface with the public and also performs its duties as the main supplier of information to the circle/zonal commands and police posts. Through ICT public will be able to view information regarding status of their complaints and the police will be able to provide feedback on the same.

The research is conducted by Human Development Research Centre (HDRC) and lead by renowned professor Dr. Abul Barkat and his fellows.

Dr. Abul Barkat at the Presentation on PSC conducted Research Methodology

Impact:

Policing is a highly complex, information- led activity that requires the integration of multiple data sources, often in short time frames. The sensitive nature of most information and the severe consequences of possible errors further increase the relevance of adequate design and use of ICT.

Expected Outcome:

Help Bangladesh Police to understand the view of the rural and urban police stations about their need and current status of ICT facilities, utilization, and challenges in preparing future strategies for strengthening the PS through appropriate ICT technologies.

General Objective:

To investigate factors influencing adoption, utilization, benefit and challenges of using ICT in police station at rural and urban Bangladesh.

Specific Objectives

1. To examine the factors that influence ICT utilization in police station
2. To assess existing status of technologies to solve the information challenges of police station as well as need of ICT facilities
3. To identify associated benefit as well as challenges in utilizing ICT

Field Data Collection

- A total of 10 Field Assistants (FA) will be deployed for field data collection for 10 days.
- It is expected that one FA will be able to complete survey in one police station (PS) in one day.
- Thus, 10 FAs is expected to complete the surveys in 84 PSs in 10 days including weekly holidays and internal travel between the sample PS
- Final sample size of police station (PS)) will be 84. In each sample PS, at least 3 police officers will be interviewed. Hence, the total numbers of interviews are 252.

The Impact of Bangladesh Police Training on Field Level Policing: An Analysis

Due to the high visibility of police officers and interaction with the public on a constant basis, police officers must practice situational awareness consistently throughout the day. This mindset underscores the need for routine application of training to ensure adequate investigative technique, officer safety, and efficiency. Law enforcement personnel have the responsibility to make sure that they are up-to-date on modern day training, formal education, and become knowledgeable in tactics used by the criminal element. Training and education is more than just sitting in a classroom and getting a certificate. It is also about applying this newfound knowledge and maintaining proficiency.

The research is conducted by Prof. Dr. Diba Hossain, Institute of Education and Research (IER), DU and her fellows.

Objectives of the study

- To understand the effectiveness of the selected in-service training programs offered by PSC, DTS and SB
- To examine the impact of existing training programs on field level policing
- To assess the challenges of training programs for further intervention

Factors that Influence the behaviour of Police Personnel in Bangladesh- An Analytical study (Proposed by the Researcher)

Police personnel are often termed as authoritarian, cynical and submissive. On the other hand, they are said to be responsible, determined and dedicated. Police behavior is affected by multi faceted forces including features of the organization that recruit, train supervise police, as well as the environment within which they work and their immediate surroundings. Multiple internal and external forces can influence how the police act. The research will critically analyze the factors that influence the behavior of police personnel.
